Dear Mr. Suter:

Thank you for the copy of Network-Based Management Systems by Archibald and Villoria.

I find it both comprehensive and detailed. Planning and action have improved with the adoption of more systematic analysis and control of long-range programs. I emerge with the conviction, however, that the book is too preoccupied with how to proceed and too little concerned with why. Imagination and understanding of alternative objectives and approaches seem subservient to process and schedules.

Despite this minor shortcoming, I am confident that it will prove of great value to many people in the management field.

Sincerely,

Richard Helms
Director
